Leadership 1.01

Do you work at a knowledge institution, startup or scale up? Do you collaborate frequently with colleagues, and do you want to hone your skills in that area? And/or do you want to explore whether you would like to work as a lead, senior, or project lead in the future?

Then this is the training for you!

What will you learn?

Collaborating in a scale-up is an art in itself. You will learn how to make clear agreements with colleagues and how to hold them accountable. You will learn how to help others think and draw their own conclusions by asking questions. You will also learn how to give feedback that is clear and fosters a good relationship, and how to handle receiving feedback that is difficult to hear. Furthermore, you will learn how to assess what to do when nothing seems to be working.

How do we go about?

You will be given some models and useful theories, and we will spend most of the time experimenting and trying things out. It helps if you know in advance what you definitely want to learn and if you bring along some situations you find challenging. During the training, you will give and receive a lot of feedback.

Practical

The training is one day, from 09:30 to 18:30, and takes place at the beach in Scheveningen, Kijkduin, Noordwijk, Katwijk or Zandvoort. The location will be accessible by public transport.

You will receive some reflection questions by email in advance and afterwards, you will receive a digital booklet by email containing the theories and models we discussed and practiced.
